Profile:

I am a confident and personable student who demonstrates excellent communication and relationship building skills together with a mature outlook on life. I would describe my natural approach to life as a mathematical/analytical one, I am really comfortable with numbers and use an element of this when solving problems. I also apply my friendly and personable personality to situations, I genuinely enjoy challenging myself and am not afraid to step out my comfort zone, and it is an opportunity to learn. My experience so far has enabled me to enhance my inner leadership and mentoring skills, helping others achieve great results through tailored coaching. I am told I have a good sense of humour and do like to add fun to appropriate situations.

Kai is truly one of the most unique students I have ever taught. Students who start training at a very young age, often become dispirited as they evolve into teenagers, and whereas students often give up at this time, Kai did quite the opposite. Kai has become an incredible young man, and has recently began teaching alongside me. He is able to communicate effectively with all age groups from children as young as 4 years up to adults of pensionable age. Kai has a gift of finding some form of common ground with all students which enables him to engage with them fully. This in turn helps to put students at ease and allows them to learn in a relaxed and comfortable environment.

Ms R Reed (Bedford Modern School) 2019

I have had the pleasure of teaching Kai for the last three years as well as accompanying him to Spain, where he undertook a week's work experience together with an intensive language course. During this time, I have had the opportunity to observe Kai in both an academic environment as well as working in a foreign country out of his comfort zone. One quality that immediately stands out is his determination to push the boundaries and challenge himself in order to achieve his potential. His ability to communicate makes him immediately likeable and his resilience means that he will never sit back in the face of adversity, preferring to meet the challenge head on and seek and act on advice.
